A QUARTER MILLION

YEAR before last the N. A. A. C. P. counted 90,000 members; last year because of the assault on our secretary in Texas and the post-war slump in all united effort we had about 88,000 members. This year, recovered and alive, with a new secretary and new assistants, with our hands so full of work and the field so ripe for harvest that we scarcely know where to begin, we are launching a spring drive. We are going to find 250,000 red-blooded black and white men and women who believe in freedom and in the methods which we have proven worth fighting with.

If you belong to us, renew your membership now and bring a brother.

If you have been sitting on the side lines, cheering, get into the game.

If you have been standing outside criticizing and doubting and hesitating, read our record printed in these pages, and get busy. Do something. Join us! Help us! We have not all the wisdom, but we have some. We have not yet created a new heaven and a new earth, but we have done more than talk and gesticulate. Members of the N. A. A. C. P. pay from $1 to $10 or more a year.

THE CRISIS costs $1.50 a year.

Spend at least $2.50 now on freedom for your children.

AN OPEN LETTER TO WARREN GAMALIEL HARDING

Sir:

BY an unprecedented vote you have been called to the most powerful position in the gift of mankind. Of the more than hundred million human beings whose destiny rests so largely with you in the next four years, one in every ten is of Negro descent.

Your enemies in the campaign sought to count you among this number and if it were true it would give us deep satisfaction to welcome you to the old and mystic chrisom of Negroland, whence many mighty souls have stepped since time began.

But blood and physical descent are little and idle things as compared with spiritual heritage. And here we would see you son of the highest: a child of Abraham Lincoln and Lloyd Garrison and Frederick Douglass; a grandson of Thomas Jefferson and John Quincy Adams; and a lineal descendant of the martyred Fathers of the Free of all times and lands.

We appeal to you: we the outcast and lynched, the mobbed and murdered, the despoiled and insulted; and yet withal, the indomitable, unconquered, unbending and unafraid black children of kings and slaves and of the best blood of the workers of the earth—

WE WANT THE RIGHT TO VOTE.

WE WANT TO TRAVEL WITHOUT INSULT.

WE WANT LYNCHING AND MOB-LAW QUELLED FOREVER.

WE WANT FREEDOM FOR OUR BROTHERS IN HAITI.

We know that the power to do these things is not entirely in your hands, but its beginnings lie there. After the fourth of March, on you more than on any other human being rests the redemption of the blood of Africa and through it the peace of the world.

All the cruelty, rape and atrocities of slavery; all the groans and humiliations of half-freedom; all the theft and degradation of that spirit of the Ku Klux mob that seeks to build a free America on racial, religious and class hatred—the weight of all this woe is yours.

You, Sir, whether you will or no, stand responsible. You are responsible for the truth back of the pictures of the burning of Americans circulated in European drawing-rooms; for the spectacle of 82% of the voters of the South disfranchised under a government called a democracy; for the hypocrisy of a nation seeking to lend idealism to the world for peace when within its own borders there is more murder, theft, riot and crucifixion than was ever even charged against Bolshevik Russia.

In the name of our fathers, President Harding, our fathers black and white who toiled and bled and died to make this a free and decent nation, will you not tear aside the cobwebs of politics, and lies of society, and the grip of industrial thieves, and give us an administration which will say and mean: the first and fundamental and inescapable problem of American democracy is Justice to the American Negro. If races cannot live together in peace and happiness in America, they cannot live together in the world. Race isolation died a century ago. Human unity within and without Nations, must and will succeed—and you, Sir, must start bringing this to pass.

PAN-AFRICA

THE growth of a body of public opinion among peoples of Negro descent broad enough to be called Pan-African is a movement belonging almost entirely to the twentieth century.

Seven hundred and fifty years before Christ the Negroes as rulers of Ethiopia and conquerors of Egypt were practically supreme in the civilized world; but the character of the African continent was such that this supremacy brought no continental unity; rather the inhabitants of the narrow Nile Valley set their faces toward the Mediterranean and Asia more than toward the western Sudan, the valley of the Congo and the Atlantic.

From that time even in the rise of the Sudanese kingdoms of the 13th, 14th and 15th centuries there was still no Pan-Africa; and after that the slave trade brought continental confusion.

In 1900 at the time of the Paris Exposition there was called on January 23, 24 and 25 a Pan-African Conference in Westminster Hall, London. This conference said in its address to the world:

"In the metropolis of the modern world, in this the closing year of the nineteenth century, there has been assembled a congress of men and women of African blood, to deliberate solemnly upon the present situation and outlook of the darker races of mankind. The problem of the twentieth century is the problem of the colour line, the question as to how far differences of race, which show themselves chiefly in the colour of the skin and the texture of the hair, are going to be made, hereafter, the basis of denying to over half the world the right of sharing to their utmost ability the opportunities and privileges of modern civilization."

A second conference was held at Tuskegee Institute about 1912.

Finally, at the time of the Peace Conference in Paris, February, 1919, the first Pan-African Congress was called. The interest in this congress was worldwide among the darker peoples. Delegates were elected in the United States, the West Indies, South and West Africa and elsewhere. Most of them, of course, were prevented from attending by war measures and physical difficulties.

However, there did assemble in Paris, 57 delegates from 15 countries where over 85,000,000 Negroes and persons of African descent dwell. Resolutions were adopted taking up the question of the relation of Africa to the League of Nations, and the general questions of land, capital, labor, education, hygiene and the treatment of civilized Negroes. Blaise Diagne, Deputy from Senegal and Commissioner in charge of the French Colonial Troops, was elected president of a permanent organization, and W. E. B. DuBois of the United States, Editor of THE CRISIS, was made secretary. A second congress was called to meet in Paris in September, 1921.

Meantime, the feeling of the necessity for understanding among the Africans and their descendants has been growing throughout the world. There was held from March 11-29, 1920, the National Congress of British West Africa. This body after careful conference adopted resolutions concerning legislative reforms, the franchise, administrative changes, a West African University, commercial enterprise, judicial and sanitary programs. They also stated their opinion concerning the land question and self-determination and sent a deputation to the King. The deputation, consisting of 3 lawyers, 2 merchants, an ex-Deputy Mayor, a physician and a native ruler, went to England and presented to the King a demand for the right to vote, local self-government, and other matters.

Other movements have gone on. In the agitation for Egyptian independence there is a large number of men of Negro descent. In South Africa, the African Political Organization and the Native Congress have had a number of conferences and have sent delegates to London, protesting against the land legislation of the Union of South Africa.

In the Canal Zone and in the West Indies have come movements looking toward union of effort among peoples of African descent and emphasizing the economic bond. In the United States there is the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, with its 90,000 members and its very wide influence and activities.

Many of these movements will be represented in the second Pan-African Congress next fall, and out of this meeting will undoubtedly grow a larger and larger unity of thought among Negroes and through this, concerted action. At first this action will probably include a demand for political rights, for economic freedom—especially in relation to the land—for the abolition of slavery, peonage and caste, and for freer access to education.

THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS

FOURTY-ONE nations, including nearly every Negro and mulatto and colored government of the world, have met in Geneva and formed the assembly of the League of Nations. This is the most forward-looking event of the century. Because of the idiotic way in which the stubbornness of Woodrow Wilson and the political fortunes of the Republicans became involved, the United States was not represented. But despite its tumult and shouting this nation must join and join on the terms which the World lays down. The idea that we single-handed can dictate terms to the World or stay out of the World, is an idea born of the folly of fools.

The Parliament of Man, the Federation of the World, is a fact; but it is not a fact calling for the sigh of relief or the folding of hands. The question of control leaps to the forefront and that control, thanks to the insincere Wilson, the astute Lloyd George and a cynical Clemenceau, rests today in the hands of the imperial, military and industrial dictators of the world. It is the next duty of the world to wrest this power from them. With a world of democracies this would be easy and the first step toward World Democracy in the League of Nations is Democracy in each nation. "Self-determination", a "world safe for democracy", a "new freedom" for all men,—black, brown, yellow and white—these slogans survive the downfall of the man who mouthed them and are as eternally true and pressing as though he had never lived.

BLEEDING IRELAND

NO people can more exactly interpret the inmost meaning of the present situation in Ireland than the American Negro. The scheme is simple. You knock a man down and then have him arrested for assault. You kill a man and then hang the corpse for murder. We black folk are only too familiar with this procedure. In a given city, a mob attacks us unprepared, unsuspecting, and kills innocent and harmless black workingmen in cold blood. The bewildered Negroes rush together and begin to defend themselves. Immediately by swift ledgerdemain the mob becomes the militia or a gang of "deputy sheriffs". They search, harry and kill the Negroes. They disarm them and loot their homes, and when the city awakes after the "race riot", the jail is filled with Negroes charged with rioting and fomenting crime!

So in Ireland! The Irish resist, as they have resisted for hundreds of years, various and exasperating forms of English oppression. Their resistance is called crime and under ordinary conditions would be crime; in retaliation not only the "guilty" but the innocent among them are murdered and robbed and public property is burned by English guardians of the Peace!

All this must bring mingled feelings of dismay to Irishmen. No people in the world have in the past gone with blither spirit to "kill niggers" from Kingston to Delhi and from Kumassi to Fiji. In the United States, Irish influence not only stood behind the mob in Cincinnati, Philadelphia and New York, but still stands in the American Federation of Labor to keep out Negro workingmen. All this contains no word of argument against the ultimate freedom of Ireland—which God speedily grant!—but it does make us remember how in this world it is the Oppressed who have continually been used to cow and kill the Oppressed in the interest of the Universal Oppressor.

THE WOMAN VOTER

THE colored women have made a splendid record at their first national election. Applying for registration in large numbers, they endured purposeful delays and deliberate insults. They have shown themselves in states like Georgia and Louisiana to be more modern and sensible than their white sisters; and throughout the country they cast a large and influential vote.

In the encouragement which they have received before and since the election there has been but one false note. James B. Dudley, colored president of a state school in Greensboro, N. C., came out in the local paper before election with several columns of advice to colored women not to attempt to vote. The arguments adduced deserve no particular consideration. They were the familiar remarks about "women in the home" and the general un wisdom of Negroes "meddling" in politics. Mr. Dudley received the usual pat on the back from the white editor. The grave and astonishing thing about this is that at this late day a Negro leader, North or South, should dare to advise colored men or women not to vote. This was a general procedure 25 and even 15 years ago, but we have almost forgotten it, and it is to be hoped that James B. Dudley is the last of a pitiable group.

Bishop C. H. Phillips is not dead, as the February CRISIS intimated. We wish him a long and happy life.

National Association for the ... Advancement of Colored People.

THE BATTLE OF 1920 AND BEFORE

(Eleventh Annual Report, Abridged)

A PAID organization which demands the support of thinking men must at regular intervals make an account of what it has done, what it proposes to do, and what moneys it has received and how it has expended them.

§1—What we have done

The N. A. A. C. P. was founded in 1909 and incorporated in 1911. From that time to 1920 it held in the United States nearly 2,000 large meetings and conferences—not to mention thousands of other meetings at which it appealed for justice for Americans of Negro descent before, perhaps, four millions of people.

In addition it sent 4,462,899 copies of THE CRISIS to every state in the Union and to every country on the globe. It distributed millions of copies of other literature.

It has from the first taken the matter of the rights of American Negroes into the courts. Court cases have been defended involving false arrest, peonage, segregation, "Jim Crow" cars, the right to vote, intermarriage, civil service, rioting, lynching, slander and civil rights in general. Many of these cases have been lost; but we have won remarkable victories, as in the case of the segregation law, which was declared unconstitutional, November 5, 1917, and in the case of the "Grandfather Clause" for which we joined with others in defending a suit which resulted in the outlawing of that method of disfranchisement.

We have won hundreds of civil rights cases involving the right to use theatres, restaurants and other places of public entertainment, from Boston to California, and we have gained forward looking decisions in peonage and lynching cases.

Another avenue of work has been to oppose hostile legislation. In this we have been signally successful. Of 13 anti-intermarriage bills introduced in state legislatures in 1913, we helped to kill 12; of 20 anti-Negro measures introduced in the 63rd Congress, including inter-marriage, "Jim Crow" bills, service in the Army and Navy, segregation, etc., we did efficient work in helping to kill every one; of 11 similar bills in the 64th Congress not one was made into law largely because of our work. In many cases of laws about to be enacted we have succeeded in protecting the rights of colored people, as in the Smith-Lever Bill for national aid to agricultural training and in the Civil Rights Bill enacted in New York and copied in several other states.

We have especially sought to attack the barbarous practice of lynching. We have raised an Anti-Lynching Fund which was first used to call a great anti-lynching conference. We sent literature concerning lynching, together with pictures, all over the civilized world so as to arouse protest from men like Bernard Shaw and others. We have helped in the passage of a law in Kentucky to punish sheriffs who surrender prisoners. We have made the statistics of lynching available to everyone and we have encouraged a series of careful personal investigations. We have made special efforts to create judicial precedents and to put states on record against lynching by inducing governors in three notable cases to refuse to extradite Negro prisoners threatened with lynching. Finally we have had introduced into Congress bills to investigate lynching and to punish lynchers by Federal action.

We have especially given attention to the economic rights of Negroes, investigating workingmen's riots like those in St. Louis and Chicago, opposing discrimination against Negroes in civil service and in labor unions, disclosing illegal efforts for stopping colored workers from migrating, and illegal oppression in places where they have gone.

In the outbreaks of race rioting we furnished investigators, lawyers and publicity.

In elections we have questioned leading candidates, from presidents down, on their attitude toward our civil rights. We kept one judge, who had decided that Negroes had no right in Pullman cars, off the bench of the Supreme Court, and we have helped to defeat congressmen and other officers whom we considered enemies of the race.

We have fought discrimination in great public movements, as in the National Bar Association, and when the World War broke upon us we began a fight that made Negro officers possible. We carried on the effort to secure for them fair treatment and promotion. We worked against discrimination in the draft in the S. A. T. C. and against nurses and physicians. We led the march of Silent Protest which was made in a dozen cities against unpatriotic discrimination.

We have aided unjustly condemned prisoners, from poor little Virginia Christian in Virginia and Pink Franklin in South Carolina to the 12 victims of intended judicial lynching in Arkansas.

We have initiated a Pan-African Congress as a means of assembling together Negroes and persons of African descent throughout the world for self-knowledge and self-protection.

To do this work our officers in a single year traveled over 100,000 miles, and in the ten years they have traveled a distance equal to twenty times around the earth.

To support this work we have sought the co-operation of men and women of every race who believe in justice.

Our membership has grown as follows:

	Branches	Members
1912	3	329
1913	10	1,100
1914	24	3,000
1915	50	6,000
1916	70	8,785
1917	80	9,282
1918	165	48,994
1919	310	91,203
1920	356	88,277

Work like this costs money and we have raised during these 11 years the following sums:

1911	$5,108.90
1912	11,815.15
1913	16,841.73
1914	14,030.70
1915	13,094.86
1916	23,521.48
1917	14,427.27
1918	29,454.11
1919	61,755.70
1920	47,211.53

The total contributions to the Anti-Lynching Fund (included above), 1916 to 1920, have been $30,232.69 of which $29,676.59 has been expended.

No part of this money has gone for the support of THE CRISIS magazine, nor has the Association or any one else furnished any capital for that magazine—except that during the first five years of its existence the Association paid part of the editor's salary and furnished THE CRISIS office space. For these contributions the total expense of THE CRISIS to the Association from 1910 to 1915 (outside of what it would have expended if THE CRISIS had not been founded) was about $9,000. Since January 1, 1916, THE CRISIS has been absolutely self-supporting and not a cent of the money contributed to the N. A. A. C. P. is used to support THE CRISIS.

§2—The Present

Coming now specifically to the year 1920 we are glad to be able to report progress. The outstanding work for the year has been our defense of Arkansas peons, the exposure of conditions in Haiti, the pushing of anti-lynching legislation, assistance in defeating the Graham Sedition Bill, the winning of a half-dozen cases involving civil rights and discrimination; and activities to increase and guide the Negro vote during the campaign.

In Arkansas 12 men were condemned to death and 67 were sentenced to long terms of imprisonment as a result of the "riots" when these men tried by legal methods to collect their wages and were met by mob murder.

In Arkansas on March 29 the State Supreme Court reversed the death verdict of the Phillips County Circuit Court in the cases of Ware, Giles, Fox, Banks, Martin and Wordlow because the verdict was improperly rendered; and the cases were remanded for new trial. At the same time the court affirmed the verdict of death in the cases of F. Hicks, E. Hicks, Moore, Knox, Coleman and Hall. At the re-trial the first 6 were re-sentenced to death. The cases were then re-appealed to the State Supreme Court. This court a second time reversed the verdict on the ground that Negroes had been excluded from juries in Phillips County in contravention to the 14th Amendment and the Civil Rights Act of 1875. The briefs upon which this verdict was based were prepared by our legal committee in New York. Governor Brough made an apparent effort in the newspapers to influence the decision of the Supreme Court while the cases were being reviewed the second time.

Robert L. Hill, head of the Progressive Farmers' and Household Union of America, had been accused of fomenting the alleged riots in Arkansas. He disappeared but was arrested in Topeka, Kansas. The Governor of Arkansas asked for his extradition. The National Office and the local branches immediately moved in Hill's defense. The result was a long legal fight, but on March 23 Governor Allen decided that Hill was not guilty of the crime charged and that if he were returned to Arkansas his life would not be safe. He thereupon refused extradition. The State of Arkansas attempted then to secure Hill's extradition through the State and Federal Courts, but the case in the State Court failed and the case in the Federal Court was withdrawn by the United States Department of Justice on representation from the N. A. A. C. P. As a result Hill is free.

Maurice Mays, who was charged with the murder of a white woman in Knoxville, Tenn., has been defended on the general belief that he is not guilty. The Knoxville Branch had the case investigated and with the help of other Tennessee branches a new trial was secured.

Mr. E. R. Franklin, of Mississippi, was sentenced to 6 months in prison, fined $400 and beaten by a mob for selling THE CRISIS. When justice was asked for him the governor threatened the editors of THE CRISIS. Through advice from N. A. A. C. P. headquarters the people of Jackson, Miss., finally arranged to cover Franklin's bond and he escaped to the North.

Besides these cases we are defending Thomas Ray to prevent his extradition from Michigan.

This year we continued our defense of Edgar Caldwell, who killed the conductor of a street car in Anniston, Ala. Caldwell had been tried by civil authorities, although a soldier, and sentenced to death. The case was taken to the Supreme Court of the United States and appeals were made to the governor of Alabama, but without success.

On June 16 the lynching of 3 Negroes was reported at Duluth, Minn. We immediately had the circumstances investigated and induced Governor Burnquist, president of our Saint Paul Branch, to especially interest himself in the case. Full reports of the lynching and the alleged crime were made and affidavits were secured from 14 other colored men who were being held on the same charge as those who had been lynched. We found that it was not proven that any crime had been committed. Our local branches defended 13 of the accused men in court, one of whom was acquitted by a jury, 5 were dismissed by order of court, and 6 had the indictments against them dismissed at the request of the prosecuting attorney. Only one of the men was found guilty and his case has been appealed. We also secured indictments against 21 persons who participated in the lynchings. These cases have not yet come to trial.

We sent a special investigator to Florida to investigate the riot and disfranchisement against Negro voters. His reports were published in THE CRISIS and other journals and laid before Congress and the Department of Justice. We found that between 30 and 60 Negroes had been killed at Ocoee, that the United States Constitution in many Florida towns had been violated, and that the Ku Klux Klan was intimidating colored people.

The Association has been pushing the resolution of Senator Curtis to investigate lynching and the bill of Congressman Dyer to make lynching a Federal offence. We have been represented at hearings and helped in the perfecting of the bill. In March Governor Morrow signed an anti-lynching bill in the presence of a committee of colored citizens headed by the president of the Frankfort Branch of the N. A. A. C. P. This bill provides for the removal of a peace officer who surrenders his prisoner and punishment for lynchings and attempted lynchings.

In June, Representative Graham of Pennsylvania introduced a bill giving the Department of Justice the right to punish seditious acts and to prohibit the use of the mails for the purpose of promoting such acts. When amended this bill would have made it impossible for THE CRISIS to be issued or the N. A. A. C. P. to carry on its propaganda against lynching and mob violence. Our Association was represented at the two hearings on the bill and branches and members all over the country sent protests. The bill was defeated.

In California our branches have won a civil rights case which settles the fact that assigning special seats by the management in theatres is segregation and therefore illegal. In Colorado after a two years' fight our branches have won a decision that a bootblack stand is a public accommodation and that Negroes must not be discriminated against. In Wisconsin the Milwaukee Branch has been successful in winning a restaurant case brought under the Civil Rights Act. In Connecticut and Rhode Island our branches are still fighting for civil rights bills based on the New York law. Public hearings have been held and the fight will be continued until successful.

In the New York Post Office a colored sub-clerk who had resigned to enter the Naval Service and had made application for re-instatement after his discharge, was, despite the law, kept out of his job. The National Office interfered and he received re-instatement. The Association has taken up the matter of discrimination against railway trainmen. The Assistant Secretary in company with the representatives of the Association of Colored Railway Employees of Memphis and Louisville conferred with the United States Railway Administration at Washington. Their whole contention was not granted, but an increase in wages amounting to $12,525 monthly and back pay amounting to $125,000 were secured.

In the Brooklyn High School the Association secured the admission of 6 colored seniors to the annual promenade after it had been decided that they should not attend.

In March the Association sent James Weldon Johnson to Haiti where he stayed 6 weeks and studied the American invasion. He published a series of articles in The Nation, which put the administration on the defensive, and led to startling disclosures.

The specific charges made in the articles on conditions in Haiti were: (1) that some 3,000 Haitians had been killed (2) that men and women had been tortured (3) that Haitian autonomy was overthrown by force or threat of force (4) that the salaries of the President and other high officials of the Haitian government had been held up because they would not sign a contract giving a monopoly of money shipments to the National City Bank of New York (5) that a rigid censorship prevented any communication from Haiti concerning the conduct of the United States Marines.

As a result of Mr. Johnson's visit to Haiti and the consequent publicity, the Commander of the Marines was asked by Secretary Daniels to make a report on conditions there and Mr. John McIlhenny, financial adviser of Haiti, was summoned to Washington to report on the general financial situation affecting Haiti.

The charge that more than 3,000 Haitians had been slaughtered by United States Marines was verified by the report of Brigadier-General Barnett, who not only placed the number of those killed at 3,250 but referred in his report to the "indiscriminate killings" which had taken place. When this charge was first made the Secretary of the Navy belittled it. Upon the publication of the Barnett report, Senator Harding was requested to reiterate the charges with all the strength at his command, whereupon he immediately called upon Secretary Daniels for publication of all information in possession of the Navy Department relating to its administration of the Haitian republic. On the following day Secretary Daniels announced the appointment of a Naval Board of Inquiry. Then the charges made by the N. A. A. C. P. began to achieve tangible results.

After a number of hearings in Washington, at which appeared Brigadier-General Barnett, Admiral Knapp and John J. McIlhenny, the Naval Board of Inquiry left the United States for Haiti and there held hearings. Among those testifying before the Board in Haiti were many Americans as well as natives, the principal witness being President Dartiguenave.

The Court of Inquiry absolved the Marines. This, of course, was to be expected from a court of inquiry consisting of naval men acting on charges brought against a branch of the Navy, but already Representative Bland of Indiana has introduced a resolution providing for a Congressional investigation of the relations between Haiti and the United States, and a similar resolution has been introduced in the Senate by Senator Hiram Johnson.

In February the National Office sent to all prospective presidential nominees a questionnaire asking if they would favor Federal laws against lynching, the enforcing of the 14th and 15th Amendments, the abolition of "Jim-Crow" cars in inter-state traffic, national aid to education, a proportionate number of Negro soldiers and officers in the Army, the abolition of racial segregation in the civil service of the United States, and withdrawal from Haiti. Two of the 17 candidates questioned replied, one of whom was Senator Harding.

The Eleventh Annual Conference of the Association, held at Atlanta, Ga., May 30-June 2, was the greatest in many respects of the 11 annual meetings of the Association. Prior to the conference much doubt was expressed regarding the extent to which the truth might be told at Atlanta. At the conclusion of the conference it was indeed gratifying to note that every speech, every testimonial, every conversation was frank, straight-forward, spoken without fear and in earnest sincerity that was completely convincing.

There were 228 delegates and members registered, representing 92 branches and 29 states; the total attendance at the 4 mass-meetings and at the business sessions exceeded 15,000 persons. Many were turned away from each mass-meeting, although the largest auditorium which could be secured was the place of meeting.

Especially gratifying was the attitude of the press. More publicity was secured for this meeting than ever before. The proceedings of each day's session were carried throughout the country and were reported with gratifying fullness and accuracy. Denunciations of lynching, disfranchisement, the "Jim Crow" car, unequal educational opportunities for colored children, as well as frank discussions of remedies for these and other evils, were carried by the press, in most cases just as given by the speakers. However, there was little editorial comment on the conference by the southern press.

In the presidential campaign we sent questionnaires to all presidential candidates and instructions for voting to the new women voters; we encouraged colored voters throughout the country to register, and investigated and published the election discriminations in Florida and elsewhere. Our representatives appeared before Congress to advocate the reduction of congressional representation in the South.

During the year we held 287 large meetings, 8 by the national office, in addition to hundreds of smaller meetings. Our officers traveled 77,500 miles.

The publicity campaign during the year was notably successful—not only did THE CRISIS reach a large number of readers but also special and successful effort was made under the direction of Mr. E. L. Bernays to spread the news of the Atlanta Conference. The outstanding press triumph of the year was Mr. Johnson's articles in The Nation.

The national importance which the Haitian exposé assumed was reflected in the willingness of important newspapers like the New York Times to take statements from the National Association in reply to the pronouncements of the Departments of State and of the Navy.

The third important source of public notice for the Association was its exposure of the widening activities of the revived Ku Klux Klan. An interview with the Assistant Secretary on his investigation into the election day riots at Ocoee, Florida, was printed prominently on the first page of the New York Evening Post and resulted in interviews with other newspapers and a controversy between the Assistant District Attorney and the "imperial wizard" of the Ku Klux Klan.

Frequent protests against disfranchisement of colored people during the election were sent to Washington and extensively published and commented upon.

The total of recorded press stories sent out during the year was 131. This does not include a number of letters to editors in various cities urging anti-lynching legislation, and on other subjects which elicited editorial comment in which reference was made to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Although it is impossible to estimate the volume of space obtained in newspapers throughout the country, the increasing success of the Association's publicity is measurable by the willingness of important newspapers to give its statements prominent position. Furthermore, the newspapers of New York City, including the Tribune, the Evening Post, the Mail, the World and the Call, on several occasions sent reporters to the National Office for authoritative information on race relations.

his father contributed every month toward his education! After a time this allowance stopped and the boy was left on his own resources. Later he managed to go to college as a student of pharmacology, receiving five dollars a month from a beneficent society. Somehow he pulled through and found himself at the end of three years a graduate, though penniless. He tells a charming story of how a friend at this point, João R. Villa Nova, invited him to his house to dinner and then insisted on his spending the night. After some hesitation he accepted the second invitation also, for a dinner and a night's lodging meant very much. On going to the room assigned, he found therein to his amazement all his possessions. He stayed on with these people, tutored their children, and finally married their daughter.

Publicity was the great weapon which he chose to carve out his lifework. In 1877 he joined the staff of the News Gazette. By 1879 he was wielding an effective and fearless pen. He was a terrible agitator. For Patrocínio there was only one cause—abolition. And there were only two positions—pro or con. If a man was for abolition, Patrocínio was with him. If he were not, Patrocínio was against him, and "Have at him!" was his cry. He was like some one obsessed. He spoke, he wrote, he harangued in his amazing style, he traveled abroad in the interest of his cause, he made political alliances with but one end in view.

Dom Pedro II. went to Europe and left his daughter Dona Isabel as regent. She had no small gift for statesmanship herself, but she allowed herself for a time to come under the influence of Baron Cotegipe, an ardent anti-Abolitionist. Patrocínio, who by now, having run the gamut of established newspapers, had started one of his own, the City of Rio, attacked them both. Later when Cotegipe was thrown from power Patrocínio, too astute to miss such a chance, rushed to the support of the princess and called her "The Fair Mother of the Brazilians" and "The Divine Redeemer." Writing of the political crisis which wrecked Cotegipe, he said cleverly to Isabel: "Your Highness is saved; now you can rule."

Both the Republicans and the Abolitionists claimed Patrocínio by the way, but he was indifferent to their claims. He made no secret of the fact that the party which exerted itself most to further his great ideal, would possess his influence. "The social question of Emancipation," he wrote, "brings near to me everybody that sympathizes with it, from the Emperor to the humblest slave."

In 1888 on May 13, Dona Isabel, with a stroke of a pen set with diamonds and emeralds, signed a decree liberating 1,500,000 slaves!

Patrocínio's cause was won and his hand had helped to win it. He had seventeen years in which to taste the fruits of his great victory. Then he died, "the most indefatigable apostle that the world has known for the abolition of slavery."

JOSE DO PATROCINIO

THE FOOLISH AND THE WISE

Sallie Runner Is Introduced to Socrates

LEILA AMOS PENDLETON

MRS. MAXWELL THORO (born Audrey Lemere) tiptoed down the spacious hall toward the kitchen of her dwelling whence issued sounds, not exactly of revelry but—perhaps jubilation would be a better fit. For in a high soprano voice her colored maid-of-all-work, Sallie Runner, for the past half-hour had been informing to the accompaniment of energetic thumps of a flatiron, whomsoever it might concern that she had a robe, a crown, a harp and wings.

Mrs. Thoro moved quietly for, enjoyable as was Sallie's repertoire, one could never tell when she would do some even more enjoyable improvising, and her employer knew from long experience that Sallie's flights were much freer and more artistic when she was unaware of an audience.

Just as Mrs. Thoro reached the kitchen door the soloist started off on the verse, "I gotta shoes," so she stood quietly listening until the verse ended:

"I gotta shoes, yo' gotta shoes,
All a Gawd's chillun gotta shoes;
Wen I getto hebben goin' to put on my shoes
An' skip all ober Gawd's hebben.
Hebben, Hebben! Ever'buddy hollerin' 'bout
hebben
Ain't goin' dere.
Hebben, hebben, goin' to skip all ober Gawd's
hebben."

As the singer ceased she whirled around upon her employer with a loud laugh. "Ha, ha, Miss Oddry!" cried she. "I knowd yo' was dere. I sho is glad yo' done come, 'cause I'se mighty lonesome an' powerful tired. Jes' was thinkin' to myself dat I'se goin' to try to swade Brother Runner to move away fum Starton. Nobuddy don't do nothin' here but git born'd, git married an' git daid, an' wurk, wurk, wurk! Miss Oddry, I'se goin' to tell yo' a secret."

"What is it, Sallie?" inquired Mrs. Thoro. "I don't lak to wurk. Nuvver did."

"Why, Sallie! That is a surprise," replied her employer. "I should never have guessed it, for there is not a more capable maid in town than you are."

"Yassum, I guess dat's right. I wurks wid my might an' I does wut my hands finds to do, but taint my nature doe. Muss be my Ma's trainin' an' mazin-grace-how-sweet-de-sound mixed togedder, I reckon. Miss Oddry, does yo' know wut I'd ruther do dan anything? I'd ruther know how to read an' write dan anything in de whole, wide world, an' den I'd nuvver do nothin' else but jes' dem two."

"Well, Sallie, I'm sure you would get very tired of reading and writing all the time; but yo're not too old to learn."

"Nome, not too ole, mebbe, but too dumb an' too sot in de haid, I reckon. Miss Oddry, couldn't yo' read to me or talk to me on ironin' days 'bout sumpin' outside uv Starton? Cose I wouldn't want yo' round under my feet on wash-days, but ironin'-days is fine fur lissening."

"Why yes, Sallie, I'd love to do that. Why didn't you ask me before? Mr. Thoro and I are re-reading an old school course, just for the fun of it, and I'll share it with you. I'm sure you would enjoy hearing about some of earth's greatest characters. How would you like to have me tell you about Socrates?"

"Sockertees? Huh! Funny name! Socker-tees wut?"

"Well, in his time men seldom had more than one name, Sallie. He was the son of Sophroniscus and Phaenarete. He was a sculptor and a philosopher."

"Gosh!" cried Sallie. "A sculpture an' a lossipede! Wusser an' mo' uv it! But go on, Miss Oddry, tell me mo' 'bout him."

"Socrates was born about 469 years before our Lord, and died at the age of seventy. He is said to have had thick lips, a flat nose, protruding eyes, bald head, a squat figure, and a shambling gait."

"Why!" exclaimed Sallie. "He was a cullud gentmun, warn't he? Musta looked jes' lak Brudder Runner, 'cordin' to dat."

"Oh no, Sallie, he wasn't colored."

"Wal, ef he been daid all dat long time, Miss Oddry, how kin yo' tell his color?"

"Why he was an Athenian, Sallie. He lived in Greece."

"Dar now! Dat settles it! Ever'buddy knows dat my cullud folks sho do lak grease."

"Oh Sallie! 'Greece' was the name of his country, just as 'America' is the name of ours." Sallie grunted.

"Socrates," continued Mrs. Thoro, "was a very wise, just, and a good man, and he loved his country and his countrymen very much. He used to delight in wandering through the streets of Athens, conversing with those whom he met, giving them the benefit of the truths he had discovered and seeking to obtain from each more truth or new light. He spent the whole day in public, in the walks, the workshops, the gymnasiums, the porticoes, the schools and the market place at the hour it was most crowded, talking with everyone without distinction of age, sex, rank or condition. It was said that 'as he talked the hearts of all who heard him leaped up and their tears gushed out.'

"Hole on, Miss Oddry," interrupted Sallie, "Jes' wanta ax yo' one qeshun. While ole Sockertees was runnin' round the streets, shootin' off his lip an' makin' peepul cry, who was takin' keer uv his fambly? Sounds mo' an' mo' lak Brudder Runner to me."

"Well, Sallie, he had a very capable wife who bore him three sons and whose name was Xanthippe. No doubt she managed the household. The only fault Socrates found with her was that she had a violent temper."

Sallie slammed the flatiron down and braced herself against the board, arms akimbo, eyes flashing with indignation.

"Vilent temper?" cried she. "Vilent temper? Whut 'oman wouldn't had a vilent temper in a fix lak dat? I sho do symperthize wid Zantipsy an' I doesn't blame her fur gittin' tipsy needer, pore thing. I betcha she was es sweet es a angel befo' she got mahred, 'cause whut it takes to change yo' disposition, a man lak dat sho is got. It's jes' es much es a 'oman kin do to take keer uv her house right an' raise her chil-lun right wen her husband is doin' all he kin to hepp her, less mo' wen he ain't doin' nothin' but goin' round runnin' he mouf. Dis ain't de fust time I'se met a gentmun whut loves he kentry mo' dan he do he home folks. Go on, Miss Oddry, dear, tell me some mo' 'bout Reveral Eyesire Runner's twin brudder."

"Of course, Sallie," said Mrs. Thoro laughing, "Socrates was human and had his faults, but all in all he was a noble character."

"I hopes so, Miss Oddry, but I'll have to hear mo' fo' I 'cide."

"Socrates," resumed Mrs. Thoro, "believed in signs and omens and in following warnings received in his dreams; he also claimed that there was an inner voice which had guided him from childhood."

"Miss Oddry," expostulated Sallie, "yo' keep on tellin' me Sockertees warn't cullud, but yo' keep on tellin' me cullud things 'bout him. Wen we all b'lieve in signs an' dreams yo'-all allus says, 'It's jes' darkey superstishun an' igrance.' How yo' splain dat?"

"Well, Sallie, in those days the most learned people were very superstitious. Of course we know better now."

"How yo' know yo' knows better, Miss Oddry? How yo' know yo' don't know wusser? Dere's one thing I done found fur sho, an' dat is dat de mo' folks knows de less dey knows. I b'lieves in dreams an' wen I follers dem I goes right. Cose I ain't nuvver heerd no cujjus voice, but ef ole Sockertees say he heerd it I b'lieve he heerd it. Nobuddy can't prove he didn't."

"Very true, Sallie, but,—"

"Jes' one minute, Miss Oddry, please. Dere's sumpin' I been thinkin' a long time, an' now I knows it. An' dat is dat wen yc' come right down to de fack-trufe uv de inside feelin's, peepul is all alak; black ones is lak white ones an' dem ole ancienty ones lak Sockertees is jes' lak dese here ones right now."

"I believe there is some truth in that, Sallie, but shall I go on about Socrates?"

"Oh, yassum, Miss Oddry, I do love to hear 'bout him."

"He tried most earnestly to make people think, to reason out what was right and what wrong in their treatment of each other. He constantly repeated, 'Virtue is knowledge; Vice is ignorance', while to the young his advice was always, 'Know thyself.'"

"Humph!" interrupted Sallie. "Mighty good advice, Miss Oddry, but it's some job, b'lieve me. I'se es ole es Methusalum's billy goat now an' I ain't nuvver found myseff out yit. Dere's some new kink comin' out ev'ry day. How 'bout you, Miss Oddry?"

"I think you are right, Sallie. But don't you think we are better off if we study ourselves than if we just blunder along blindly?"

"Oh, yassum, I guess so. But how did ole Sockertees come out wid all his runnin' round an' talkin'?"

"Very sadly, I am sorry to say. Very sadly. Most of the Athenians entirely misunderstood him."

"Bound to," said Sallie.

"He made a great many unscrupulous enemies."

"Bound to," said Sallie.

"They accused him of being the very opposite of what he was."

"Bound to," said Sallie.

"And finally they tried him and condemned him to death."

Sallie set down the flatiron and folded her arms, while her eyes flew wide open in astonishment. "What?" she exclaimed. "Jes' fur talkin'? Wal I-will-be-swijjled!"

"Yes," continued Mrs. Thoro. "They imprisoned him and sent him a cup of hemlock, which is a deadly poison, to drink."

"But he had mo' gumption dan to drink it, I hope?"

"It was the law of his country, Sallie, and Socrates was always a law-abiding citizen."

"Wal, fur gosh sake!" cried Sallie. "Whut in de world was de use uv him havin' all dat tongue ef he couldn't use it to show dem peepel wherein? He mouts well been es dumnd es a doodlebug!"

"But," explained Mrs. Thoro, "he had spent his whole life in trying to make the Athenians love and honor and obey their laws and he was willing to die for the same cause. He had many friends who loved him truly and they tried to persuade him to escape, but by unanswerable arguments he proved to them how wrong they were."

"Humph!" grunted Sallie. "Tonguey to de last! An' in de wrong way to de wrong ones."

"Plato, who was a friend as well as a pupil," continued Mrs. Thoro, "tells how beautifully Socrates died. He took the cup of hemlock quite calmly and cheerfully and drained it to the dregs. When his friends could not restrain their sorrow for the loss they were about to sustain, he reproved them and urged them to remember that they were about to bury, not Socrates, but the shell which had contained him, for he, himself, was about to enter the joys of the blessed. He tried to the last to make them see that unless they honored and obeyed all laws, their country could not long survive, because lawlessness was the same as suicide."

"Miss Oddry," said Sallie, solemnly, "don't yo' wisht we had one million of dem Socker-tees down here in ower sunny Soufland?"

THE BLACK SWAN

IN 1809 a little black girl was born in Natchez, Mississippi, and named Elizabeth Taylor. While still an infant, she was brought to Philadelphia and reared by a Quaker woman, Mrs. Greenfield. After that she became known as Elizabeth Taylor Greenfield; but because of her beautiful voice she is even better known by a better name, the Black Swan. She early gave evidence of the astonishing power and richness of her voice. Lessons were given her by friends. When Mrs. Greenfield learned of this she summoned Elizabeth to her presence.

"Elizabeth," said she, "is it true thee is learning music and can play upon the guitar?"

"It is true," Elizabeth reluctantly confessed.

"Go and get thy guitar and let me hear thee sing."

The girl obeyed, and when she had finished she was astonished to hear her kind friend say: "Elizabeth, whatever thee wants thee shall have."

Her education went on until Mrs. Greenfield died. In 1851 she began her public reputation by singing before the Buffalo Musical Society. This led to invitations to sing in various other cities and in 1853 she gave a concert at Exeter Hall, London. The Daily Register, of Albany, said: "The compass of her marvelous voice embraces twenty-seven notes, reaching from the sonorous bass of a baritone to a few notes above even Jenny Lind's highest."

Harriet Beecher Stowe says in "Sunny Memories of Foreign Lands":

"From this breakfast we returned to dine at Surrey parsonage; and, after dinner, attended Miss Greenfield's concert at Stafford House. . . . The choicest of the elite were there. Ladies in demi-toilet and bonneted. Miss Greenfield stood among the singers on the staircase, and excited a sympathetic murmur among the audience. She is not handsome, but looked very well. She has a pleasing dark face, wore a black velvet headdress and white carnelian earrings, a black mohr antique silk, made high in the neck, with white lace falling sleeves and white gloves. A certain gentleness of manner and self-possession, the result of the universal kindness shown her, sat well upon her. Chevalier Bunsen, the Prussian ambassador, sat by me. He looked at her with much interest. 'Are the race often as good looking?' he said. I said, 'She is not handsome, compared with many, though I confess she looks uncommonly well today.'

"Miss Greenfield's turn for singing now came, and there was profound attention. Her voice, with its keen, searching fire, its penetrating, vibrant quality, its 'timbre,' as the French have it, cut its way like a Damaeus blade to the heart. It was the more touching from occasional rusticities and artistic defects, which showed that she had received no culture from art. . . . Had she had culture equal to her voice and ear, no singer of any country could have surpassed her."

The Black Swan was often compared with Jenny Lind and had it not been for her race, she might easily have been known as one of the greatest singers of her day.

It is of interest to know that the phonograph records which are about to be issued recording the voices of great colored singers of the present time, are to be called the "Black Swan" records.

A CORRECTION

W. E. B. DU BOIS

UNDER the caption "Marcus Garvey" we published in our December and January numbers two articles which incidentally discussed the affairs of the Black Star Line Steamship Corporation. We regret that certain statements therein might be misconstrued. Our statement that the Yar-mouth is a wooden vessel was incorrect, as it is in fact steel. We have naturally no intention to embarrass this corporation in its business or operations.

CHICAGO

"A Preliminary Study of Inter-Racial Conditions in Chicago," by H. R. Gold and B. K. Armstrong, has been issued by the Home Missions Council. They say:

Looking up the police record back to January 1, 1918, and down to May 1, 1920, the records showed 25 bombs directed at the homes of colored people and 8 at the homes of white people who had sold real estate to colored people. In the later months the bombing occurred with greater frequency, which may easily portend another crisis in the nature of the race riots of July, 1919, when for three days minor civil warfare reigned. * * * *

During the World War, as European immigrants returned to their countries and many American workmen were sent to the cantonments, a labor shortage resulted in Chicago; likewise in other northern centers. Negroes came North in large numbers, attracted by higher wages and an opportunity to escape restriction and discrimination in the South. Chicago was particularly attractive and accessible. The colored population increased rapidly. In 1910 it was about 46,000; in 1917 about 80,000; in 1920 about 125,000. Armour & Company employed less than 500 Negro workers in 1916; in 1919 the number exceeded 3,000. Today approximately 10,000 Negroes are employed in the stockyards, or about one-fourth of the entire number. These men and women were needed and wanted. They helped to prepare the meat that kept life and fight in the boys at the front in Europe.

The result was a great shortage of housing in those districts where Negroes had been wont to live. They, therefore, overflowed into neighboring districts.

The residents of the Hyde Park, Kenwood and Grand Boulevard districts used organized resistance to the invasion of the colored people. Thus the Kenwood-Hyde Park Property Owners' Protective Association took it up. Vigorous propaganda resulted. The depreciation of property values was given much advertisement. The Negroes were held up to be undesirable neighbors in every way. They were represented as lacking culture, education and sanitary standards. They were charged with seeking to live among the white people merely for the sake of doing so, and with seeking "social equality"; with desiring to intermarry and form other social contacts with the whites. They were held up as a constant menace to white women. Every argument, whether tinged with fact or wholly imaginary, was used to inflame prejudice against the colored people. The Journal, issued by this organization, is replete with preachments against the Negro and with plans and methods for his repression. Some of the direct activities against the Negroes are these: Campaign among real estate dealers of the district to offer no property for sale to the Negroes. Campaign to boycott the employment of Negroes who do not live within the allotted black belt. Hotels particularly are urged to observe this rule. * * *

The Negroes are entirely within their constitutional rights when they purchase property wherever they desire and can do so. The propaganda and the violence evidenced in the bombing do not stop them. They themselves have organized. Their organized activities in this connection come chiefly from the Protective circle. The program is to make a study of the contested district and learn how many colored people own property there; to discover what encumbrances are on property held by Negroes and help in retaining this property by financial assistance when money from white lenders is withdrawn; to learn the extent and result of the bombing and hearten the people to hold their ground; to engage in a campaign of publicity and education among their own people and among whites wherever there may be opportunity; to engage in legal contest to maintain their rights; to induce the city to afford them adequate police protection.

The police made few arrests of the bombers.

Comparing the cost of living and income of colored and white workers in Chicago, Pittsburgh and elsewhere, the study says:

1. Cost of living: The average number of persons per family is practically the same, with the whites having three-tenths more members. Both spend practically the same proportion for food, clothing, rent, furnishings and miscellaneous items. This is true also of all the communities studied. The whites of Chicago spend about twice as much for fuel and light as the colored or white of Pittsburgh. As to surplus and deficit in the family treasury, we note them to be about the same in the two cities. The whites in the country generally exceed the colored by 17.6 per cent in surplus.

2. Income: The white husband has a larger annual income by $200 than the Negro husband. The Negro wife contributes about $5 more to the family budget, or about twice as much as the white wife. The white children of the family contribute between $200 and $300 more than the Negro children. The total average annual income of the white family is about $300 larger than that of the Negro family.

The families were grouped according to their annual income. The arrangement brings out the fact that the largest percentage of both white and Negro falls within the $1,200 to $1,500 income group for both Pittsburgh and Chicago. For the United States as a whole the average number of Negro families is highest in the $900 to $1,200 income group; the whites in the $1,200 to $1,500 income group. In the income group under $900, 8% of Pittsburgh whites but 10.2% of Pittsburgh Negro families are found; in the income groups about $2,100, 23% of whites and but 2% of Negro families are found. * * *

When the husband's income is not adequate for the family the wife and children are called upon to assist and lodgers are taken into the family. The consequences of this are often serious. The wife's strength and attention are divided, children are exploited, the family circle is invaded. The study leads to the conclusion that in Chicago the percentage of mothers at work is 10.2% Negro, 2% white; children 12.2% Negro, 11.8% white; lodgers in 18.4% of the Negro homes; in 5.9% of white homes. For the United States as a whole it is 43.7% to 8.9%; 24.6% to 18.6%; 12.7% to 5.1% respectively.

3. The $300 difference in annual income: The outstanding fact is that the Negro family has an income approximately $300 less per year than the white family. This is true although the Negro wife and children have helped to secure the budget oftener than the white, and lodgers are more frequently taken into the Negro family. In the light of these facts, is there any wonder why the living standard of Negro families is often lower than that of the white families? For let it be remembered that the difference is not merely in money but in time and strength and in the strain on family privacy and security.

Why this difference in wage? It is in the main summed up in the remark of a Chicago foreman: "That job is a white man's job; place that nigger elsewhere." A Negro carpenter obliged an office manager by making some alterations at night. Some one observing his skill asked about his wage and learned it was considerably lower than that of other carpenters. "But," remarked the Negro man, "they are white." To restrict the Negro's opportunity in more skilled occupations and to have him do the common labor is one of the severest forms of repression. The family income is thus lowered and the standard of living is necessarily fixed lower. When the Negro family has the same income, practically the same amount of money is spent for the necessities of life and the usual distribution of that income for these necessities is made. Given the same amount of leisure from toil and opportunity the Negro will seek culture. In Louisville, Ky., one of the branch libraries is arranged to be used exclusively by Negroes. By comparison of the record of this branch with those of libraries used exclusively by whites the facts reveal that the Negroes read a larger proportion of serious books, biography, history and the like, than the whites; and the total average for this city's serious reading is high.

With regard to industrial status and efficiency, the study concludes:

Taking, then, the indications of these facts about percentages of skilled and unskilled labor, turnover, time lost and wage rates and adding to these observations the statements of foremen, managers and superintendents, we may reasonably believe that under like conditions there is usually not much difference in efficiency. Wherever differences do appear we may look for variations in conditions rather than in race.

Men of the Month.

THE late Charles Redmond Douglass, son of Frederick Douglass, was born in Lynn, Mass., October 21, 1844. Mr. Douglass served in the 54th Massachusetts Infantry and the 5th Massachusetts Cavalry; on December 7, 1880, he helped to organize the Capital City Guards' Battalion, in which he served as a Captain and a Major; the organization is now the First Separate Battalion, National Guard of the District of Columbia. In 1867 Mr. Douglass became the second colored appointee to a first-class clerkship in the War Department; he was detailed from the Treasury Department, in 1871, to accompany the Santo Domingo Commissioners; in 1872 he was appointed a Trustee of the Seventh School District, Washington, D. C., and elected Secretary and Treasurer of the Board which was composed of 5 white and 2 colored members; President Grant appointed Mr. Douglass United States Consul to Santo Domingo, in 1875; he resigned this appointment for work in the Pension Bureau. He was retired in August, 1920, after 53 years in the Government service.

Mr. Douglass was a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, being Commander of Post No. 21, and Assistant Patriotic Instructor; he was also a member of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, District of Columbia Branch. In 1892 he established the summer resort known as Highland Beach, Maryland, a tract containing 26 acres with a beach frontage of 1,400 feet.

Mr. Douglass is survived by a widow and two sons, Joseph H., the violinist, and Haley G., a teacher in Dunbar High School.

ALONZO HERNDON was born a slave at Walton County, Ga., in 1858. When he was 28 years old he went to Atlanta, having $11 in his pockets, and secured work in a barber shop. He became manager of the shop; later he bought the shop and is now the owner of 3 barber shops, 1 valued at $30,000 and 2 at $15,000 each. He has visited most of the large cities in America and several cities abroad to get ideas for his business. Later he became the pioneer among colored men in the insurance business in Georgia. He organized the Atlanta Mutual, which has grown rapidly and of which he is the majority stockholder.

Mr. Herndon has been married twice, his first wife being the well known Adrienne McNeill Herndon, a reader and actress of great ability; the present Mrs. Herndon was Miss Jessie Gillespie, of Chicago.

Mr. Herndon's real estate is estimated at $500,000; his income tax last year was $3,000. Recently he gave $10,000 for the purchase and equipment of a day nursery and kindergarten in Atlanta.

THE late John C. Dancy was born at Tarboro, N. C., May 8, 1857. He studied at Howard University and became a public school teacher. When 21 years of age he managed the campaign which elected his brother as Mayor of Tarboro, a city of 10,000 inhabitants. At the age of 23 he was elected Registrar of Deeds of Edgecomb County, and won two re-elections; for 8 years he was chairman of the Republican Executive Committee, for 16 years secretary of the State Republican Convention, and 4 times a delegate to the Republican National Convention, twice from the State-at-large. In 1891 President Harrison appointed Mr. Dancy Collector of Customs at Wilmington, N. C.; President McKinley re-appointed him to this position. President Roosevelt appointed him Recorder of Deeds in the District of Columbia, in 1901, which position he held until 1910.

Mr. Dancy was editor of the Star of Zion, the official organ of the A. M. E. Zion Church, for

BETA CHAPTER, CHICAGO, OF THE ALPHA K

7 years and of the Quarterly Review; he was also Financial and Church Extension Secretary of the A. M. E. Zion Church. He traveled extensively in England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales. A widow and 3 children survive him.

ZAMBESI BOAT SONG

OUT from the waters deep
Arose a misty cloud.
The palm-tree sprang from sand; it rears its head.

The white bird sings.

Now on the silvery stream
The grasses nodding float.
The sand-bird builds her nest; her cry is heard.

The sun sleeps on.

Low in the west she goes,
The rocks are dark and cold.
The village fires rise high with red and gold.
The night-jar sings.

We are glad to welcome the first issue of Music and Poetry, published by the Holt Publishing Company, of Chicago, Ill.; also The Negro Outlook, published by The Negro Outlook Company at Memphis, Tenn. An editorial entitled "Prospective" outlines its purpose:

The policy of The Negro Outlook shall at all times be constructive—that is, its eye will ever look beyond the immediate and to the final analysis of things. Its platform is founded upon the broad principles of human rights—the doctrine of God our Father, man our brother. We shall, at all times and under all circumstances, stand against the inhuman monster, race prejudice.

J. Morton Finney, of the Department of Latin of Lincoln Institute, Jefferson City, Mo., has written a pamphlet on Some Cultural Values of Latin and Some Latin Authors.

* * *

Two interesting books are Songs and Tales From The Dark Continent, by Natalie Curtis-Burlin, and Spring in New Hampshire and other poems, by Claude McKay. Mrs. Burlin's book is a compilation of the songs and stories of C. Kamba Simango, a Portuguese East African, of the Ndaou tribe, and of Madikane Cele, who is of the Zulu tribe, Natal, Zululand, South Africa.

Mr. McKay's volume is a slim but precious fulfillment of his earlier promise. Both these books will be reviewed in a later number of THE CRISIS.

AS TO THE KU KLUX

THE Imperial Wizard (!) of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan sets forth the purposes of his organization as follows:

"It was publicly stated when this modern organization was formed that it stood pledged to proclaim and preserve in America four great fundamental principles, to wit: Absolute and undying devotion to the government of the United States and upholding and strengthening all the laws of the land from the Constitution of the United States down to the ordinances of the smallest community in the nation; perpetual maintenance in America of white supremacy in all things social, political and commercial; the complete and absolute separation of church and state, and the protection of woman's honor and preserving the sanctity of the home."

The Albany, N. Y., Telegram asks pertinently:

Are the Knights who pledged "undying devotion to the government of the United States and upholding and strengthening all the laws of the land from the Constitution of the United States down to the ordinances of the smallest community in the nation" as strong for the enforcement of the Fifteenth Amendment to the Constitution, which provides for equal political rights to the Negro and which was written into the Constitution largely through northern influence, as they are for the Eighteenth Amendment which was written into the Constitution largely through the influence of the South? There is strong conflict here. In the first place "undying devotion" to the Constitution cannot mean "perpetual maintenance in America of white supremacy in all things social, political and commercial." There is further conflict in the fact that the South fought for state rights in the war that came as a result of the spirit of the Fifteenth Amendment. In their hearty endorsement of the Eighteenth Amendment they completely ignored state rights. There is further conflict in their attitude toward the Eighteenth Amendment with their professed determination to have "complete and absolute separation of church and state." The Eighteenth Amendment absolutely combines church and state functions. It can be regarded in no other light than the enforcement of a church dictum through the law of the land.

It would seem that the enforcement of the Fifteenth Amendment does not figure in Wizard Simmons' desire to uphold the Constitution, for he says in the Atlanta, Ga., Journal:

The Ku Klux Klan is for the upholding of the law. It does not in any way seek to be a law unto itself, but it does believe in white supremacy. It believes that never in the history of the world has a mongrel civilization endured. It is opposed to the Negro being allowed to vote, or the Japanese or the Chinese, because such suffrage means political equality and is another way of saying that a Negro has as much right to occupy the office of governor or any other high position as a white man.

Paul Fulton writes in the Brooklyn, N. Y., Eagle of the memories which Negroes still hold of that other Ku Klux Klan of half a century ago. He does not feel, however, that the modern Negro will receive the new Ku Klux in the manner of his forebears:

"We Negroes of New York who have migrated from the Southland are either victims of the Ku Klux or relatives of victims and we know its damnable work. Some of us have fled from our cabins at the midnight hour to the swamps and watched our cabins go up in smoke from the hellish incendiaryism of the agents of the 'invisible empire.' Some of us have had our hearts almost broken by the groans of its victims, and we have hushed our voices to hear one word of sympathy, and there was none. As we gather around our firesides at evening after the day's toil our thoughts unconsciously turn to the Southland, to the home of the Ku Klux, and we wonder what new hellish broth has been brewed by them. The name Ku Klux spells rapine, license, murder, intimidation to the Negro.

"Their constitution is a 'league with Satan and a covenant with hell.' They and their kind are doing their best to wipe out the Negro race by murder and rope. They and their kind are the only people who have undertaken to change the complexion of a whole race. There is a day of reckoning coming to the Ku Klux. We have not forgotten. The groans of the Negroes done to death without judge or jury still ring in our ears and make our nights hideous; the stench from burning human flesh still offends the nostrils of Almighty God. 'The mills of God grind slowly, but they grind the entire grist.' The day the Ku Klux Klan becomes active in New York that day will bring our reckoning with the 'invisible empire.'"

DOES HUMILITY PAY?

"WE never bother the good Negro (nigger)," says the Southerner. The Chattanooga, Tenn., Times undertakes to give a case in point:

An Alabama Negro planter recently sold $15,000 worth of cotton he had raised on his place, and The Clarion, a Negro paper published in St. Louis, ventures the guess that "there is one Negro who has not become involved in any sort of controversy with his white friends'. The Negro attending to his business, working industrially to help in building up the section and adding to the wealth of his community never has any occasion to complain of his white fellow-citizens. The fact is worthy of the attention of those busybodies of the North who are eternally bent on "saving the Negro from his southern oppressors." * * *

But in Doerun, Ga., a colored man must be more—or should we say less?—than humble, for the Albany, Ga., Herald tells us of—

Rev. F. A. White, a Negro preacher from Doerun, who came to Albany after having received a severe beating, which he said was at the hands of four white men of that town, who told him they had been delegated by the citizens to punish him for teaching the Negroes in the community not to work. White denied this—he told his assailants that he had never advised the Negroes in that community against work, but this did not satisfy them, as they told him that he had set the Negroes a bad example by going about "dressed up and wearing a white collar." He said that the white men took his collar off and cut it to pieces for souvenirs, before proceeding to the task of beating him.

The effects of the beating can be plainly seen on the body of White, who is badly lacerated and bruised. He said that he was stripped naked and laid across a log by his tormentors, who used a heavy leather wagon trace. The four men, according to White, took turns at beating him, one succeeding another as fast as they became tired. The night was cold and a light rain was falling, but the men went away and left White unconscious, without having put his clothes back on. He believed that they thought him dead when they left.

According to the minister's own testimony, he must have fulfilled the most exacting of southern standards for Negroes:

He says the better class of white people at Doerun have always treated him kindly and his business relations with them have been pleasant. He declares that he tipped his hat to white people on the streets and never entered the post office for his mail until all of the white patrons had been served. He says, too, that he has never taken any part in politics.

Alas! that virtue should so often be its own only reward! The Herald concludes:

White is a humble Negro.

United States District Attorney Hooper Alexander bears witness in the Atlanta, Ga., Constitution of the South's mistreatment of the Negro for no other reason than that of his race:

"If the people of Georgia were told the details of crimes that are constantly being committed in this state against helpless Negroes, they would be entirely incredulous.

"The things of which I speak run all the gamut from the meanest of petty cheating to deliberate and plotted murder," Mr. Alexander said. "Ninety-nine out of every hundred of our people would utterly deplore and condemn what is going on, but something more is demanded of a civilized people and their government than mere sentiment. If the people of the state permit the continuance of conditions that now prevail, sooner or later we will suffer a dreadful retribution."

SOUTHERN CHIVALRY

THE Chattanooga, Tenn., Times told a story of a colored boy who was watching some swimmers in the local Y. M. C. A. swimming pool. Subsequently he was arrested on the charge of stealing money from the clothes of one of the swimmers, but the article says, insultingly, he didn't mind that, for his—complexion is of that color that knows no flush of embarrassment nor pallor of dismay, and his soul is not of the quality that is apt to revolt against the associations of police headquarters.

Also The Times tells with great show of detail of how this boy—was arrested with the money intact, and was promptly escorted to the police station.

Now it turns out the next day that the colored boy was not guilty and the real offender was a young white boy, a member of the Y. M. C. A. Does The Times apologize? It not only has nothing to say about calumniating the name of the colored boy, which it had given in full, but it withholds the name of the real culprit. The lame explanation follows:

The information at first given The Times by a "Y" official was to the effect that the colored boy was the thief. This mistake was due to some confusion the official experienced in getting the information from the police station. The colored boy was arrested, along with several other darkies, employees of the "Y" who were subject to suspicion, and he did spend the night behind the bars, but when the gray light of dawn broke the colored boy was set free and the taint was removed from his illustrious name, for the real thief had been apprehended and the money recovered.

"Y" officials, desiring to help the guilty boy to rise above future temptations, will not prosecute. As a punishment it is possible that he may be temporarily suspended from the "Y" membership, but even this suspension, it is believed, will not endure long. For his own and his family's sake his name will not be disclosed.

WEST AFRICA AND THE LEAGUE OF NATION'S UNION

DELEGATES from the National Congress of British West Africa and the Executive Committee of the League of Nation's Union have met in London. From a report of the speeches made by these delegates it is plain to see Ethiopia is stretching out her hand. The Honorable Casely Hayford, in making an appeal for a measure of home government, said:

Before ever the British came into relations with our people, we were a developed people, having our own institutions, having our own ideas of government, and the only great thing we secured from the connection was the Pax Britannica. Whereas formerly we used to have little differences among ourselves, when the British came along we all came together in a peaceful way and all worked together in harmony for the greater development of the country; but it would not be accurate to say we were a primitive people emerging from barbarism. Therefore, gentlemen, from that point of view when we come to this country to appeal to responsible authority to extend to us a certain amount of freedom in the government of our own country, we are not asking for anything that is new.

The question of Civil Service, that sore place with the Egyptians under British rule, is also touched upon:

As regards the Civil Service, we see invidious distinction made notwithstanding our education. We are men who are very eager to stand well among men, and a large number come to this country to be educated and take as good and as high a degree as any European can or does, yet when we return to our own country where there is a Civil Service, and we desire to be employed and to be remunerated equally as regards emoluments and positions with Europeans, we are relegated to a back seat.

The custom of the British to expropriate the very land of Africa is keenly resented:

I turn your attention, respectfully, Sirs, to the land question, and I may say very briefly that in British West Africa the people know what their rights are with respect to the land. Those who know anything about Africans know that if they want to keep in good relations with them, never touch their land; it is like putting your finger into his eye. Therefore we think the principle of trusteeship is carried to extreme where it is made possible for Government to interfere with the result eventually that control is practically in the hands of the Government in respect to our lands. Our people feel a certain amount of unrest. We think to a large extent that the intelligent West African is quite capable of taking care of his land without unnecessary governmental paternal control.

Dr. Bankole Bright speaks in behalf of the Cameroons and Togoland:

I may be allowed to refer to the mandatory power now exercised by France over the Cameroons and Togoland being a matter which directly touches this League of Nation's Union. I want it to be clearly understood that I am speaking authoritatively when I say that there is general dissatisfaction amongst Africans, in British West Africa, with regard to France taking over Togoland and the Cameroons.

The inhabitants of this country feel that the European nations have no right to come and "partition our lands between them without consulting us." The Honorable Casely Hayford concludes:

We have no prejudice against the French. But this we do say, Sirs, that the hope was held out to the whole of the peoples of the world as regards the right of individual peoples of self-determination. It is not fair, it is not right, it is not just, that these people should be handed over to Powers under whose flag they would rather not live. It is a crime and it has shaken the confidence of the people very, very greatly. And I ask you respectfully, Sirs (as the League of Nation's Union), that you might well consider that matter and give the people an opportunity to make representations: I ask you, Sirs, respectfully, firmly, emphatically that you might not allow any diplomatic reason to keep you from doing what is fair and what is right to the people of Togoland.

A TIMELY PROTEST

COLORED citizens of Springfield, Mass., have joined in a protest against the tendency of the American press to identify race with crime in its headlines. If a white man commits a depredation he is spoken of as a murderer, burglar, drunkard, as the case may be. But the colored malefactor is always mentioned first as a Negro. These citizens write in the Springfield Union:

Our attention has recently and often been forcibly called to the fact that when a Negro commits an offense of any sort against law and order, glaring headlines inform readers that the culprit is a Negro.

We believe, Mr. Editor, that you will agree with us that the reading masses pay more attention to headlines than to body matter. They being a majority, easily swayed, will soon form a conclusion that the Negro is a "bad lot." The same would be true if every time an Italian, Pole, Slav or even a red-headed man committed an offense, the headlines should stress his race or type. It would not be long before bitter feeling would be engendered toward such race or individual. In this connection we believe also that you will recognize the widespread harm being done the Hebrew race by the Henry Ford propaganda.

In our efforts along this line we are hoping to have your co-operation to raise a struggling and often maligned race—at least to the extent of deleting opprobrious and offensive references in your columns. Such references, oft-repeated, cannot fail to incite and intensify race prejudice.

BLACKS DEFENDED IN GERMAN PAPER

CORROBORATION from a German source of official denials by the French Government of the repeated charges voiced in the German press and elsewhere of wholesale abuses of women and children committed by the French colored troops garrisoned in the occupied territory along the Rhine is found in an article written by Lilli Jannasch in Die Frau in Staats and quoted from in the November issue of Die Friedens-Warte of Leipsic.

"And how about the black disgrace? I lived a year in the occupied territory in a little place garrisoned for months by several hundred black soldiers. The chief official of the district (Landrat) assured me that during the entire time there had been no attacks upon women or children. In fact, the blacks had become quite popular. And I heard the same opinion from the people. In many cases the blacks shared their meals with the children of the neighborhood.

"From Ludwigshafen a lady said to me last summer when I questioned her: 'When we notice how scandalously our white women and girls make friends with the blacks, how they flirt and accept gifts of chocolate, etc., we are not surprised if a misfortune occurs.' In fact, we know from our own observation that many white women find something alluring in entering into close relations with blacks; this we have frequently been able to verify when members of Negro tribes were placed on exhibition in Germany. At the time of the Industrial Exhibition in Berlin, for example, it repeatedly happened that Negroes on exhibition there disappeared for several days, and it was town talk that women of 'good society' had been entertaining the Negroes. Similar things have happened in cities in all parts of Germany, especially in Hamburg. Is not this 'white disgrace' on the side of German women much worse than the 'black disgrace'?"

NATIONAL URBAN LEAGUE

THE Annual Report of the National Urban League just issued is a brief review of its work and a summary of the results of the activities of its locals. The most important work—that of securing community betterment, inter-racial and racial co-operation and a healthier attitude toward living cannot be recorded. The following general statements indicate some of the methods used to bring these about.

☐ Twenty thousand persons were given employment; 135 industries were persuaded to give Negro labor a trial; including last year's placements more than 50 personnel workers have been placed in industrial plants to increase the efficiency of Negro labor; 221 noon-day meetings were held in this connection; 4 cities conducted classes for training foremen, personnel workers and for the workmen themselves; 10 cities conducted night classes for illiterates.

☐ Seven men were given intensive training and were placed as League Executives; 11 community houses were conducted in congested districts in the large cities; 30 Leagues in as many cities carried out programs for better communities through bettering conditions among Negroes in health, housing, recreation, work, education and morals; 200 white and colored social and civic agencies co-operated in this program.

☐ Several new organizations have been completed and full-time executives have been engaged in Louisville, Kansas City and Cambridge.

☐ The budgets of Urban Leagues of 8 cities are included in the City Community Chests—Louisville and Kansas City being the latest organized on this basis. Some of these organizations raised for the community chest more than their quota for the current expenses.

☐ Special investigations on housing, recreation, school attendance, condition of children's teeth, various industrial conditions, extent and conditions of unemployment have been made in 12 cities.

☐ The 2 "fellows" trained last year—like those trained in previous years—are employed in the field of social work; 5 "fellows" are now in training in schools of social work in Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston and New York, and 4 high school and college scholarships for deserving students are being maintained by a local organization.

☐ Twenty-two of the local Leagues are conducting definite educational programs, including health, thrift, training classes for industrial development, recreation and general culture.

☐ St. John's Institutional Activities of Springfield, Mass., Dr. William N. De Berry, Director, is affiliated with the League. Last year it received as a gift a farm of 54 acres which it plans to use for intensive farming and for "fresh air" work among boys.

☐ Several thousand women and children were given vacations and outings last summer in Cleveland, Detroit, Philadelphia, New York, Newark, Atlanta and Memphis by local organizations.

☐ Boys, girls and women to the number of 3,260 have been helped through Big Brother and Big Sister organizations and Juvenile Court workers of the League in 7 cities.

☐ The cost of this work to the national and local organizations for the year 1920 was $185,000.

PERSONAL

WOODWARD STUART, at Noblesville, Ind., is dead at the age of 86. He leaves an estate estimated at $75,000, which consists mostly of farm land. One son survives him.

☐ Ella M. Rice, for 23 years principal of the Colored Industrial School at New Brunswick, N. J., is dead. Her work will be carried on by her son, Everett Rice.

☐ The late Dr. Robert W. Brown, of Washington, D. C., president of the National Benefit Life Insurance Company, leaves an estate estimated at over $500,000; his practice netted him $1,000 a month.

☐ W. Calvin Chase, editor of the Washington Bee, is dead. The District Supreme Court, of which he was a member, and other courts adjourned as a mark of respect.

☐ Mr. and Mrs. George D. Birch at Brooklyn, N. Y., have celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary. There were 7 children, 1 grandchild and 10 great-grandchildren present.

☐ The Rev. James Griswold Merrill, who served as president of Fisk University during 1901-9, is dead. During Mr. Merrill's administration the curriculum of the school was enlarged, courses in domestic science were instituted and Chase Hall and the Carnegie Library were erected.

☐ The Rev. J. J. Durham, of Columbia, S.

C., is dead at the age of 74. He was president of the Baptist State Convention for the past 15 years and the founder of Morris College at Sumter. He studied at Atlanta, Fisk and Meharry.

☐ Phillip L. Smith, a Negro porter at the Savannah Cotton Exchange for 40 years, is dead. The flag on the Cotton Exchange Building was flown at half-mast in his honor.

☐ Miss Josie Harvey, a music-teacher of Philadelphia, Pa., is dead. She was a member of one of the oldest families in Philadelphia, almost every member of which displayed unusual musical talent. Two of her nephews, Carl Diton and Harvey Hebron, also have achieved distinction as a pianist and a composer, respectively.

☐ Mrs. Jessie Hale Moss, president of the Omaha, Neb., Branch of the N. A. A. C. P., is dead. Mrs. Moss was a native of Ohio, a niece of the late Samuel Blaine Allen, former Mayor of Rendville in that state, and was for several years a teacher in the public schools. During recent years she has been a resident of Omaha where she was actively connected with practically every movement for the social, educational and civic uplift of her people.

FOREIGN

AT the dinner given to British women by the American Society in London and attended by royalty, Roland Hayes, the Negro tenor of America, sang "The Star-Spangled Banner."

☐ If conditions imposed by the Army Council are fulfilled, France will have in 1923 an army of 800,000 men, 300,000 of whom will be Colonial black troops.

☐ The Negro population of Cuba is on the verge of an uprising, in a demand for the withdrawal of that section of the Platt Amendment, which prohibits the establishment of a political party based upon color.

☐ A school plantation has been built at El-Oualadji, Sudan, for instruction to natives in modern methods of cotton growing. The Colonial Cotton Company is constructing 2 mills in the valley of the Niger, at Segou and at San and is shipping gins and presses to Sudan and Haute Volta.

☐ Public libraries have been opened in St. Thomas, Christiansted and Frederiksted, V. I., by the American Red Cross and American Library Association. Each library contains an average of 2,000 volumes.

CHILDREN IN THE MIST

By George Madden Martin

The CRISIS says: "Eight stories written simply and sympathetically give a new concept of the CHILDREN IN THE MIST who live in Mississippi, Louisiana, Florida, the rice fields of the Carolinas and the backwoods of Kentucky. These are people emerging from the fogs of slavery and gazing through a glass darkly on a freedom promised, but as 'yet denied.' Mrs. Martin has let the characters in the main speak for themselves so the reader must be touched and thrilled and saddened according to his own dictates."

"Delightful as ever, this new volume of George Madden Martin's can be read for pleasure alone. But it will bear re-reading and thought, for it has a purpose—a desire to interpret to one race the meaning and the needs of another."—New York Times.

27th ANNUAL STATEMENT OF SOUTHERN AID SOCIETY OF VA., INC. (Condensed)

The SOUTHERN AID SOCIETY OF VA., INC., notes with a high regard the timely and insistent demand of our people for Facts and Figures from corporations and institutions appealing to them for patronage and investment. The Southern Aid Society of Va., Inc., has annually published full and accurate statements of its Income and Disbursements, as well as its Assets and Liabilities: And it has given wide distribution of this matter to its membership and the public. This was done despite the criticism of competitors and other uninformed persons: who said that, "since our people were not up on financial matters, the time and money spent in preparing and publishing such information was simply a waste of efforts and good money." But the Southern Aid management knew that the race was making rapid strides of advancement in education, business and finance, and would, therefore, soon be alive to such matters. Today's "Show Me" spirit of our people compensates us for our efforts and convinces the critics that the people now demand more than Names and Promises as inducements for their support or investment. Therefore the Southern Aid Society of Va., Inc., takes great pleasure in spreading before the public its 27th Annual Financial Statement for consideration.

The above verified record of great achievement does not satisfy us: We are therefore planning for greater growth thru better and larger service to our policyholders in the hours of sickness, accidents and death: In opening more avenues of employment to more of our people: And by supporting and co-operating with other Race Enterprises.

The unstinted and liberal support of our policyholders has made it possible for us to attain this splendid position in finance: Therefore the conservation of their best interests shall always receive our first consideration.

THE NATION stands for justice to the Negro—

For fifty-six years it has unremittingly fought the Negro's fight and focussed public attention on his wrongs. It is pursuing this policy now even more aggressively than in the past.

THE NATION published during the past year James Weldon Johnson's series of notable articles

Self-Determining Haiti

These articles are directly responsible for the Governmental inspection of conditions in Haiti and are likely to cause the Congressional investigation which has already been recommended by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

THE NATION is planning to carry in the near future an article on Jim Crow by William Pickens. It will press the question of disfranchisement of colored voters in the South with the women voters. It will continue to fight uncompromisingly against every form of race discrimination.

Madam C.J. Walker's Witch Hazel Jelly

¶ A sharp razor and good lather are not enough to prevent a tingling smartness after the morning shave.

¶ An application of Madam Walker's Witch Hazel Jelly soothes the skin, prevents chaf and assures comfort after shaving.
